FATHER DARKLEAF

that in my day, the idea was for every girl to dance with every boy all through the evening, and to break partners as swiftly and often as possible. Any boy who had to dance with same girl more than one song by the orchestra, was "stuck" and the girl would be awfully embarassed that no one had "broken" and would be on the verge of tears. Any couple refusing to "break" were "anti-social," and shunned. The evening was spent in going from partner to partner, take a few steps and then have someone tap the gentleman on the arm, and say, "break, please." All that until the wee hours of 1:00 or 2:00 A. M., and then came a moment those of my generation will never forget. After some routine number, the orchestra would suddenly swing into Home, Sweet Home. I say they would "swing" into it, for it was a signal for some fast maneuvering. The rule was that as the dance ended, everyone would be back dancing "with the guy what brung me!" That meant that some rapid changing partners had to be made, everyone getting back to his date, but in the process, no girl left without a partner! But this always worked out, and then the tempo of Home, Sweet Home slow down, and there would be a few minutes of sweet and happy dancing to the subconscious agreement that it had been a wonderful evening; the boy proud that his girl had never had to take more than a few steps with any one partner, and the girl proud that her date had brought up so many new fellows for her to meet and dance with—and surely none of us will ever forget Home, Sweet Home. And, so I say, thank you, Joe "Fingers" Car for causing me remember yesteryear while listening to your album of Parlor Piano.

Delighted to see our old friend Frank Cale in town Friday He was having lunch with Bill Dudley and no doubt rehashing problems of vocational agriculture. I recall that while Frank lived in Appomattox, he was a great sports fan, and rarely missed a ball game. The "sage of Sparta" now heads up the department of vocational agriculture in the state. One of his great claims to outstanding merit, however, is that he reads The Times-Virginian!

L. C. Furney Joins Firm Dealing In Commercial Atomic Energy

Lester C. Furney, of 141 Jefferson St., Lockport, Ill., who has been staff assistent in the director's office at Argonne National Laboratory for 12 years has resigned his post.

Mr. Furney, and his wife, the former Lucy LeGrand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. LeGrand, of Appomattox; and their three children, Lester, 13; Margaret Anne, 10, and Robert 8, are now visiting here, and will shortly move to Clearwater, Florida.

Mr. Furney will join the firm founded by his former chief, Dr. Walter H. Zinn, in Florida.

Dr. Zinn, who resigned June 30, is president of General Nuclear Engineering Corp., Dunnedin, Florida, which is entering the commercial atomic energy field.

Furney was top aids to Dr. Zinn at Argonne. He handled the public relations for the laboratory and fulfilled many important executive assignments.

His resignation last month was given to Dr. Norman Hilberry, an acting director of the laboratory, which is operated for the Atomic Energy Commission of the University of Chicago.

With the new atomic energy firm, Furney will have more general duties, including business administration.

A native of Waynesburg, O., Furney joined the Argonne staff in 1944 when the laboratory was located on the University of Chicago campus and known as the "metallurgical laboratory."

By training a physical scientist, Furney joined the then "top secret" operation as a staff assistant. Dr. Zinn became the director in 1946.

Furney holds a bachelor of science degree from Kent State University, Kent, O., and a master of arts degree from Ohio State University.

He moved to Lockport in 1948 and has been active there in both church and civic activities.

For three years he served on the board of education of Central-Kelvin Grove school; was for one year president of the school's Band Parents Association; for two years was president of the Men's Club of the First Methodist church; for two years chairman of the committee of Boy Scout Troop 50; and member of the board of trustees of the First Methodist church.

The Navy is increasing its tanker fleet to fifty vessels.

WEEDS CAUSE HEAVY LOSSES ON FARMS

Weeds cost farmers more than insects and disease combined.

So says Allan Kates, weed control specialist at VPI. Weeds crowd out crops and compete with them for water and nutrients. For instance, one plant of yellow mustard requires twice as much nitrogen, twice as much phosphoric acid, four times as much potash, and four times as much water as a well-developed oat plant.

A common ragweed requires three times as much water as does corn. One lambs-quarter in a hill of corn reduces the yield by one-third. In small grain, green flower buds, flowers and weed seeds reduce the value of the grain, increase hazard in storage, and spread weeds on the farm.

Kates says chemical weed killers have gone a long way in reducing losses caused by weeds. But the exclusive use of chemicals to replace cultivation is not recommended. Chemical weed control should be considered a supplement to, not a replacement for, cultural methods.

All weed problems cannot be solved by one method as simple as spraying. Only persistent and wise use of a combination of practices gives effective and economical weed control. Good crop rotation, effective tillage before seeding, and shallow, timely cultivation are important factors.

Each field of each farm may have a specific weed problem, and it is important for farmers to know what problems they have. Then they can find the most satisfactory control measures. Chemicals are being used successfully to control weeds in many field, fruit, and vegetable crops, and in permanent pastures. They are also being used successfully to control brush in reclaiming waste land.
